

COM 2272. Principles of Electronic Media (II; 3)

This course introduces students to detailed study of the history, characteristics and practices of major electronic media including radio, television, movies, the Internet and other telecommunications. The course includes an introduction to the function and care of basic electronic media equipment. Prerequisite: COM 2200.